Social Emotional Intelligence (SEI)

Research shows that those with high emotional intelligence have better attention skills, fewer learning problems, and are generally more successful in academic settings. That is why one of Valley Academy's pillars is social emotional learning. We want to help your children identify their emotions and manage them appropriately. Teaching children how to manage their emotions not only helps them find success in life now, but also prepares them to achieve success in the future. The following website has tools to help you support your child's social and emotional development and reflect on your own skills in the process. Click on the link or copy and paste it into your web browser, then scroll down and find the grade your child is in. You will then be able to read all about your child's social emotional development and needs.
